Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from My Son Diana: A Farce in One Act Yesterday I did my utmost to induce you to try your hand at snipe shooting, but it was of no use. Louisa. My dear uncle, I confess I m afraid of fire-arms. Cul. Weak-minded female, how do you ever expect to get a husband? Louisa. But, my dear uncle, everybody hasn t had the peculiar education you have thought proper to give my cousin Di . Cul. Aha! a god sound heart gymnastic education - no nonsense about it! My military predilection made me to long for a son - Fate though proper to bestow on me a daughter - I have, therefore, done my best to make up for the disappointment by rendering my daughter as like a son as possible. My poor wife made me promise never to allow Di to leave home until she was married - I determined therefore, to superintend her education myself; and so, the moment she had attained her fifth year, I popped my son Diana into pantaloons, and there she has remained ever since. (Report of a gun heard without L. H. U. E.) Do you hear that? - the young rascal s out shooting. Louisa. She s a first rate shot, I know; but she s utterly incapable of hemming a pocket handkerchief. Cul. I know she can t hem, but she swims like a dolphin, she can leap a four barred, and as shooting, why she ll split a wafer at forty paces! What a soldier she would have made to be sure. Louisa. There s one of her accomplishments that you ve forgotten to mention; she...
