Yes, I'd recognize her writing anywhere, I said with complete conviction. On this yellowed piece of stationery was a note. As each member of the older generation passes, a piece of the very foundation of family leaves with them, one fragment at a time. Younger members of that unit often forget what it means to be family by letting the God-given connections between brothers, sisters, mothers, and fathers lose their importance as they live independently of these vital relationships. One such family searches for atonement with the beginning of a letter initiated decades earlier. On an unassuming day, one woman's love of antiquing will lead her down a path of redemption, love, and the memories of grandparents gone but not forgotten. The loving tale of a wife and mother finding a blast from the past significantly laced with God's grace and surprise sparks a plan into motion for siblings to reunite for the first time in years. What stories will the antiques tell? Who will listen to them? Find...
